Setting a welcoming tone

With new clients, it can be helpful early on (ie. beginning of a history exam) to let them know you welcome gender & sexually diverse clients. Even if this does not apply to them directly, they may have a family member or friend who is in need of this care provision.

“I let all my new patients know early on that I work with many diverse people. Therefore, I welcome you to share anything that you feel is relevant for me to know, in order to make sure I provide you with the best possible care. If there is ever anything about your body, your gender, your identity, or your sexual health that you want to discuss or ask questions about, please don’t hesitate to do so.”

Person-centered care

Many exams, tests, treatments, and medications are specific to a person’s current anatomy and presenting concerns. Therefore, a gender diverse person’s legal sex marker or sexual orientation are not fool proof criteria for assessing what care provision is most suitable.

When it’s relevant to know, ask the person respectfully & confidentially. It is helpful to let the person know why & how your question is relevant to the care you will provide for them.
